Welcome to Smithsonian Global Sound for Libraries

Smithsonian Global Sound for Libraries, produced in partnership with Smithsonian Folkways Recordings, is a virtual encyclopedia of the world's musical and aural traditions. The collection provides educators, students, and interested listeners with an unprecedented variety of online resources that support the creation, continuity, and preservation of diverse musical forms.

It includes the published recordings owned by the non-profit Smithsonian Folkways Recordings label and the archival audio collections of the legendary Folkways Records, Cook, Dyer-Bennet, Fast Folk, Monitor, Paredon and other labels. It also includes music recorded around the African continent by Dr. Hugh Tracey for the International Library of African Music (ILAM) at Rhodes University as well as material collected by recordists on the South Asian subcontinent from the Archive Research Centre for Ethnomusicology (ARCE), sponsored by the American Institute for Indian Studies.

PLAYLIST FOLDERS

Playlists are tracks arranged into albums. You can create these yourself, or can view playlists already arranged for you by our editors, or by your faculty or library. The folders below are collections of playlists.

Please see our Playlists Help file for more information.

Note: Playlists created on the trial site CANNOT be transferred to live subscription services

my My Playlists
This folder contains playlists you create or copy here

themes Themes
This folder contains playlists arranged by theme by Alexander Street Press

COURSE FOLDERS

The folders below are created by your library or faculty. Folders are used to group together listening materials for specific topics or courses. Please see our Folders Help files for more information.

Listening Test Example - Folk Legends
How well do you know American folk singers? Try your luck by listening to our Folk Legends playlist and see how many singers you can identify.
